

A great result was achieved here by integrating the varied design elements in subtle ways to bring it all together. I was confident that my prior experience would serve me well on this particular build.

Significant site engineering experience was utilised as all footing and retaining work was directly into stone.

Overall project coordination was critical due to the complexity of the site and it was important to put considerable effort into liaising with and organising other contractors.

Regular and clear communication with the client enabled all alterations and minor design issues to be resolved quickly and easily.

In the end, a magnificent home on an exceptional site with a happy client.
